Loyal friends of Narnia,

I stand before you today asking for your assistance in a very grave matter. There is a threat to our land, a threat that is beyond terrible. I call out for you to help me fight against our enemies and to stop our beautiful world falling into their hands and becoming a prison that we can never escape, no matter how hard we try, no matter what power we possess, we will be helpless if we don't prevent this from happening.

I am sorry to say that these humans have already crossed the boundaries into my land and won't leave until it becomes theirs. They are on a quest for power over this world, and for that we will not stand, for when they come face-to-face with you they will regret ever setting foot in our land.

These are desperate times and desperate measures must be put into place to catch these evil, dangerous, beastly humans who want to take this land, my land our land for themselves. To help me, I look to you, my team of elite spies, I look to you my loyal friends, I look to you citizens of Narnia who have no reason to be afraid.

Do you want to see your incredibly, amazing, selfless queen brutally ripped from her throne and replaced by savage, horrible, treacherous varmints? Is that what you want?

The fate of Narnia is in your hands. I trust you to make the right decision!

... and a fabulous Viking song!
