

Spreading happiness with our celebration stones!

To celebrate the end of our Happiness Project, learning about positive mental health, each of us created an inspirational painted stone complete with a message sharing a tip about something we had learnt about to keep ourselves and other happy.

We took our stones home over the Christmas break and then left them wherever we chose, in London, across the UK and abroad, for someone else to find. We hope they spread a little happiness to others!

Look on the following pages to see some of the messages we have received in reply!

These are some of the messages we have received from people who have found our stones!

Thank you for doing these little treasures and spreading happiness, it's brought a smile to my face when I think about it.

What a beautiful stone that is! Whoever painted it is a real artist! Thank you so much for leaving it for us to find! It is so pretty and it made us sooo happy!!

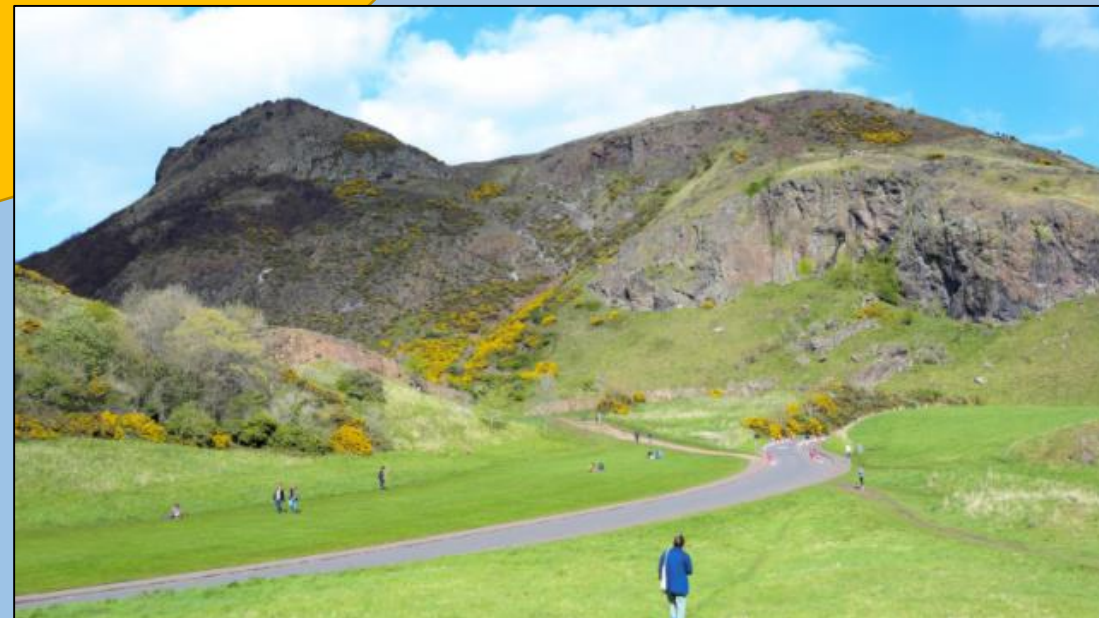

Hi,

I thought I'd thank you and let you know that I found one of your happiness stones! It was placed near the top of Arthur's Seat, an extinct volcano in Edinburgh.

I'm off to the north west of England for Christmas, so will take it with me and leave it in a similarly beautiful location.

God bless
