

Week 7: Family and Friends

This theme is all about family and friends and ran alongside the PSHE objectives teaching the children about the importance of having positive relationships.

Being and feeling connected to people around us is central to our wellbeing, our resilience and for our happiness. Relationships and connections make us feel loving and loved, support our sense of belonging and identity, they can help us become more resilient, and help our sense of enjoyment. Doing things with others is often more fun!

We wanted the children to understand and appreciate the importance of family so they wrote to a member of their family that they don't see very often, to tell them why they are important.

The children also made and swapped friendship bracelets with a new friend in our school!
