

Happiness stones

– spreading happiness far and wide!

At the end of our Autumn 2025 Happiness Project, learning about how to keep ourselves and others as happy as possible, we each made a Happiness Stone and added a message of advice for others to find. We left our stones all over the local area, the UK and the world over the Christmas break.

We were delighted to receive some messages back to say that our stones and messages had been found and that they had spread a little bit of happiness to others! We had messages from France, Bulgaria, Wales, Greece and Lapland!

Good morning

I am at Heathrow Airport working into the early hours taking down Christmas decorations, and I have found your stone under a Christmas tree.

It is in the British Airways check in area and I just wanted to say that it put a smile on my face.

Kind regards, Diane

Found lovely painted pink stone saying

Make your day bright

Hello, I work at British Airways. It was such a lovely surprise at the end of my shift to find a painted stone from one of your pupils hidden in our check in zone. After a long day it really made me smile. Planting painted pebble for spreading happiness is such a lovely idea. I've collected various stones over the years from similar projects and it always brings a smile to my face. Other ones have required me to hide them again so someone else can find them. I'm happy to do this if you'd like me to.

Kind regards and Happy New Year

Tracy

Bonjour!

I am from London but am visiting Paris and saw this beautiful stone in Buttes-Chaumont Park in the 19th arrondissement. Please pass on my congratulations to the artists- it certainly spread happiness!

I decided to leave the stone on the bench so others could share the joy, but thank you so much for bringing some happiness to a drizzly French weekend!

Hi,

I'm writing to let you know that I found one of your beautiful stones on Hampstead Heath on Saturday. I have attached a photo of the stone. I love the bright green colour. It really made me happy and I like the message about kindness that was written on the label. I have put the stone in a play park in Walpole Park in Ealing. I hope that someone else finds it and sends you a message. I wonder how far it will travel...

Best wishes,

Maria, aged 46, from London

Thank you for this lovely surprise! I have left it there for someone else to enjoy.

Good afternoon,
Firstly Happy New Year! Imogen was climbing one of her favourite trees this Christmas in the heath & found the happiness pebble. So I thought I'd share a photo. She left it there, so hopefully another child will find it too!
Best wishes

Hi kids! 😊 Hello from Madrid! We want to tell you a beautiful story about a little stone that you painted with love.

Yesterday, we were in Santa Claus Village and while we were walking and looking around, something colourful caught our eyes. It was your painted stone! We stopped, looked at it, and smiled right away.

We felt so happy and surprised. We could not believe that someone had left such a kind gift for a stranger. It made our day brighter and warmer, even in the cold Arctic weather. ❄️

Finding your stone on the Arctic Circle was very special. It felt like magic, like a little Christmas miracle. ✨ 🎄

Your stone made us feel joy, kindness, and love. It reminded us that small things can make a big difference. Just a painted stone made our hearts very happy.

We hope you know that your idea is wonderful. You are spreading happiness, smiles, and good feelings to people you don't even know. That is very special.

We hope that one day you will also find a surprise like this and feel the same joy we felt.

Thank you for being kind, creative, and thoughtful. Thank you for sharing happiness with the world. 🌍 🤝

It was truly the best Christmas gift ever!

We wish you a Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year! 🎁 🎊
